Ram, a regular customer has ordered an orthopedic cushion prescribed to him by the doctor to use as soon as possible. He ordered the cushion under prime category so that he could receive it within two days as was mentioned in the webpage of SH. However after two days he received a mail from SH, that the manufacturer is falling short of the stock for the cushion and would not be able to deliver it before one week. Getting annoyed by such mail he called the customer care service of SH for knowing the details and asked them to deliver the product soon without any delay being a privileged customer. SH on their end promised Ram to deliver the product within next two days and communicated the same to the manufacturer. Manufacturer in	1)	Discuss competence of an agent.	K1(2)

Jane owns a small business and needs someone to represent her in negotiations with suppliers. She enters into an agreement with her friend, Mark, who agrees to act as her agent to purchase goods on her behalf. Mark makes purchases from several suppliers but fails to pay them, causing financial losses for Jane's business.

- 1. Discuss the concept of agency in the context of Jane and Mark's agreement.
- 2. Analyze the rights and obligations of Jane (the principal) and Mark (the agent) in the agency relationship.
- 3. Evaluate the potential consequences for Jane following Mark's failure to pay the suppliers.
- 4. Propose the steps Jane can take to address the financial losses caused by Mark's actions and to terminate the agency relationship.
